

Are you looking for a new challenge, does the idea of joining a well-established and respected boutique heritage conservation company, where a balance between work and play is more important than working a 55-hour week, seem appealing?

Quadruga have a fantastic opportunity for a Chartered Building Surveyor to become an integral part of our successful surveying arm operating from our Manchester City Centre office, working in a thoroughly fascinating sector with like-minded personnel.

We are looking for someone with real enthusiasm for conservation with the intention that eventually you will work your way up to Director level and all the benefits that this brings.

Whilst qualifications and experience are important, we also value the mind-set of a candidate who is driven and is keen to accept new challenges within a relatively unserved and new business sector.

With Quadruga you will be involved in a variety of building surveying disciplines within the heritage sector to include but not limited to;

Contract administration

Project management

Long term maintenance surveying and planning

Commercial due diligence

Condition surveying and reporting

Building defect investigations

Must haves;

MRICS or 2+ years Private Practice/Consultancy experience as a Building Surveyor

A positive, client-facing demeanour

MSc/BSc in Building Surveying

A keen interest in conservation

Strong written and verbal communication skills

Valid UK driving license
