

Barwin

Loxford House, London

Client: Mount Anvil

Duration: 3 Weeks

Completion Date: October, 2012

Stone: Bath Stone

Description:

Loxford House, a mansion built in the mid-19th century, was once the residence of the Dent family, renowned as glove makers. It is an excellent example of Regency style architecture with an elegant white stuccoed facade.

Loxford House was recently restored to its original glory and converted into luxury refurbished homes. The focal point of Loxford House is a delightful clock tower that was also restored and tells time once again.

Barwin carried out façade repairs, external refurbishment works including stone repairs and cleaning.
